Deputy Prosecutor Says Autoists
Will be Given Reasonable Time to Procure License Tags.

APPLICATIONS ARE MADE

Many Owners of Machines Have Forwarded Money But the Tags
Have Not Been Returned.

Although many affidavits have been filed in several counties against automobilists who have failed to purchase 1914 license tags, no prosecutions have been instituted here and such action will not likely be taken by Deputy Prosecuting Attorney F. W. Wesner unless he receives specific instructions to enforce the law. The deputy prosecutor said today that he had received no information concerning such prosecutions from neither the secretary of state nor Prosecutor John Underwood and he was not inclined to file affidavits unless it was clear that the automobile license law was being wilfully violated or he was requested to begin such action.

Deputy Prosecutor Wesner further stated that at the present time he had received no names of automobile owners who had failed to take out such licenses and for that reason he would be unable to push the cases even if he desired to do so. He is of the opinion that it is the duty of the secretary of state or some other official to furnish him with the names of such persons living in this county who have neglected to pay the required license fees. He declared that it would be almost an endless task to make a personal investigation to see if each owner had a license and that the information could be more easily secured by the secretary of state.

"I would hesitate to file affidavits against automobile owners at this time," continued the deputy prosecutor, "for I have been informed by many of them that they have made application for the license tags but that such tags have not been delivered to them. It would be folly to institute proceedings against such owners for they have done their part and a conviction would be impossible." Unless the deputy prosecutor receives instructions regarding the prosecutions it is not believed that local owners will be troubled until all of them have had a reasonable time in making application for the licenses.

It is probably that there are quite a number of automobile owners in Seymour and Jackson county who have neglected to make application for such license for 1914, but many interpret the law to mean that such tags are not required unless the machines are run on the public highways. Many of the autoists have housed their machines for the winter and will not put them in use until the spring weather opens up and the roads are in favorable condition.

The prosecutions of the automobile owners were started in Marion county by Prosecutor Frank P. Baker who saw a chance to clean up between $6,000 and $7,000. The cases are being fought there by the Hoosier Motor Club and the outcome is being watched with considerable interest by owners in all parts of the state. It appears that one Leo Simon was employed by Prosecutor Baker to secure the names of all owners who had not displayed licenses on their machines prior to January 10 and a total of about 1,400 affidavits have been filed. The cases were brought before a justice of peace who would also reap a harvest in fees. Simon was to get fifty cents for each conviction of the cases reported by him.

Indianapolis attorneys have taken an active interest in the cases as many of them have not purchased auto license tags. One prominent attorney in explaining the law says no specified time is provided for purchasing the license tag and that the statute states that the license shall be procured each year. Nothing in the law, according to his opinion, provides that it would be unlawful to run a motor vehicle in 1914 with a 1913 tag displayed. The license may be purchased at any time during the year, he states.

In other counties the officials have instructed the automobile owners to procure their license without delay but no prosecutions have been started.

The section of the law relative to the purchase of the license is of interest to every owner of a motor vehicle and reads as follows:

"Registrations shall be made to expire on December 31 of each year. All registrations applied for in 1913 shall be prorated in proportion to the number of months included between the first day of the month in which any such registration was applied for, and the 31st day of December. Thereafter each registration issued prior to August 1 of any years shall be charged for at the regular rate. Registrations thereafter shall be renewed annually in the same manner and upon payment of the fees as provided herein."

CHANGES MADE ON
INDIANA DIVISION

C. S. Cameron, Formerly Trainmaster, Becomes Assistant Superintendent of Division.

J. B. PURKHISER PROMOTED

Becomes Trainmaster of Cincinnati Subdivision—S. U. Hooper in Charge of Washington District.

Several changes on the Indiana division of the B. & O. Southwestern Railroad were announced today by Superintendent J. C. Hagerty and were approved by R. N. Bagen, general superintendent of the B. & O. system. The appointments became effective immediately.

C. S. Cameron, who has been trainmaster of the entire Indiana division, has been appointed assistant superintendent of the Indiana division and will have charge of the Cincinnati terminal. Mr. Cameron came here a few weeks ago after having been in the service of the B. & O. in the east for a number of years. He has also had some railroad experience in the west and southwest. Mr. Cameron assumed his new duties this morning and is in charge of the Cincinnati office.

Hereafter there will be two trainmasters on the Indiana division, this change having been announced today. J. B. Purkhiser, who has been assistant train master for several months will become trainmaster and will have charge of the Cincinnati subdivision, from Cincinnati to Seymour and also the Louisville branch road. Mr. Purkhiser is well known in the local employees of the company having served in various capacities, and they were glad to hear of his promotion.

The second district will be known as the Washington subdivision and will include all the track from Seymour to Washington and the Seymour yards. This subdivision will be in charge of S. U. Hooper, who has been trainmaster of the Cincinnati Terminals for several months. He is an experienced railroad man and has been connected with the B. & O. Company for a number of years. His offices will be in this city and he will arrive here Thursday to take charge of the work on the Washington subdivision.

The division of the work which was formerly under the supervision of one official was made as the traffic on the Indiana division is heavy and frequently the task was too great for one man.

G. V. Copeland, who has been serving temporarily as assistant train dispatcher, will resume his former position as night chief operator. There will be no assistants in the trainmasters' offices for the present.

Mr. Purkhiser expected to go to Cincinnati this afternoon where he will remain for a short time in the terminal offices. Mr. Hooper will have charge of the entire division until Mr. Purkhiser returns.

BODY OF MISSING
FARMER IS FOUND

Lifeless Form of Enos Pruett, of
Washington County, Discovered
Near Mitchell.

DISAPPEARED JANUARY 31

Finding of $40 in Cash Scattered
About Body Disperses Theory of Foul Play.

The discovery Tuesday of the body of Enos Pruett, the Washington county farmer who disappeared January 31, deepens the mystery surrounding the case. The lifeless form of the man was found on the Rice Edwards farm, two and one-half miles northwest of Mitchell, by Mr. Edwards' son, Ollie Edwards. The young man had gone into the field to haul in some corn and found the body lying face down. $40 in money was scattered about the body and $22 in cash was found in the man's clothing.

Pruett was engaged as a timber buyer and was well known in Jackson county, especially in the western townships. Regarding the finding of the body the Bedford Mail has the following:

The testimony of Rice Edwards and son, however, would indicate that here was no foul play and that the man probably froze to death. He was in an open field where part of the corn had been cut. Quite a number of bills of various denominations were strewn about the ground. About $40 was picked up and some had been carried some distance by the wind. The sum of twenty-two dollars was found in his pockets.

As it was stated several days ago that something like $300 had been collected Saturday of the disappearance there is over $200 unaccounted for, but which may be found somewhere along the way. It is possible that Pruett may have been drinking, though he had not tasted liquor for some time, it was said. He was also subject to heart trouble and may have become ill while on his way to his mother's. A part of the money may have been lost from his pocket before he reached the place of his death.

It was the general opinion at Mitchell this afternoon that he had fallen near the spot where he was found and exposure caused the death. There were no marks of any kind on the body.

He was last seen about 6 o'clock Saturday evening two weeks ago by a farmer named Miller, who resides near by. Pruett was going towards the home of his mother and was not more than a mile from his destination.

The place where Pruett was found was about half a mile from the pike road and near a private road leading to the home of Rice Edwards.

Pruett disappeared from Mitchell Saturday, January 31st and nothing strange was thought of his disappearance until he failed to return to his home the following Monday morning as he had promised his wife.

The theory which had been advanced that he might have left that section of the country without notifying his wife or relatives, would not be listened to by his wife, who felt sure that he had met his death. To be sure, however, that he had not wandered off, telegraphic communications were sent to all of the neighboring towns and an especially hard search was made for him in Louisville.

All of the relatives felt that there was a tragedy in the affair and that he had not left the country, as he had been involved in no financial trouble and his home life was happy.

He had been living on his farm south of Salem for a few years and had it in excellent shape and was making considerable money as a timber dealer.

Of the day that he disappeared from Mitchell where he went to visit his mother, he had settled up some business affairs and had collected between $250 and $300. There was much more due him and a large amount of timber he had purchased had been sold, but the money had not been collected for it.

Pruett was well known by many in Bedford where he often came on business. At one time he was employed by Jone Coleman as a carpenter and was employed in the enlargement of the McMillan Mill at Peerless.

He was 45 years of age and is survived by the wife and two children, the oldest about 12 years of age.

He resided at Mitchell for a number of years where he owned property. He married a daughter of Lum Smith, of Mitchell.

ANOTHER MINOR ARRESTED
ON ANTI-CIGARETTE LAW

Eighteen-Year-Old Youth Nabbed by Policeman When Found Smoking
a "Pill."

Policeman Stewart saw Fred Abbott, an eighteen-year-old lad, smoking a cigarette in a pool room last night and as a result the second arrest for an alleged violation of the cigarette law was recorded. The boy was slated on charge of being in unlawful possession of cigarettes.

He was brought before Mayor Ross this morning and told the court he had purchased the tobacco but had picked up a piece of the cigarette paper on the floor of the pool room. He said he rolled the cigarette himself and had just started to smoke it when the policeman entered the room. Policeman Stewart said the youth tried to conceal the cigarette but was unable to get rid of it.

The law provides that any minor who is found with cigarettes or cigarette papers in his possession is guilty of a misdemeanor and may be punished by a fine not to exceed $100 to which may be added a jail sentence of not more than three months. The evidence was heard by Mayor Ross but he took the case under advisement and has not yet fixed the punishment.

The city authorities are endeavoring to stop the sale of cigarettes to minors and also their use by boys under age. The dealers are using every care to prevent cigarettes from falling into the hands of minors and it is known that boys under twenty-one years of age have a hard time to buy them. The authorities intend to enforce the law which prohibits minors from having them in their possession and guilty parties may expect prosecution.

Norman Nicholson, of Sparksville, was in Seymour Tuesday night and before he started for home became intoxicated and landed in jail. In police court today he pleaded guilty and was fined $1 and costs which were stayed.

VICTORY CLAIMED

Higher Scale of Wages Given Indianapolis Car Men by Decision of State Commission.

CONTRACT TO STAND 3 YEARS

Conciliatory Council Created For Adjustment of Differences That May Arise in Future.

By United Press.

Indianapolis, February 11—The employees of the Indianapolis Traction Terminal Company claimed a victory in the decision rendered this afternoon by the Indiana Public Service Commission regarding the differences taken before that body for adjustment. The disputes were brought before the Commission after the company and the employees failed to agree. Evidence was introduced by both sides.

According to the decision the employees were granted an increase in wages and also better working conditions. A conciliatory council was created before which differences in the future will be brought.

The decision provided that the company need not employ union men exclusively but that there should be no discrimination between union and non-union workmen. The old wage scale was from twenty to twenty-five cents and the new schedule is from twenty-one to twenty-seven cents. Each workman will be given one Sunday off each month. By the decision of the commission the new agreement will be in force and effect for a period of three years.

SALOONIST SAYS HE WAS THREATENED WITH KNIFE

William Dunn Alleged to Have Drawn
Weapon on John Sutton and Threatened Injury.

The case of the State of Indiana against William Dunn, charged with drawing a deadly weapon, was set for trial in Justice Congdon's court this afternoon. The prosecuting witness is John Sutton, a saloonist on High street, who claims that Dunn drew a knife on him and threatened bodily injury.

It is said that Dunn and another man engaged in a scuffle in the saloon several days ago and Chris Kloester, the barkeeper, ordered him from the house. This angered Dunn and Tuesday he saw Mr. Sutton shoveling snow from the sidewalk and threatened to injure him with the knife. Sutton said he slipped towards the door and jumped inside of the saloon and that Dunn stood on the sidewalk and threatened Kloester.

AGENTS WANTED.

The MERCHANTS Who ADVERTISE HAVE the FINEST STORES

ARE THE NEGROES BEING "FOOLED?"

Word From Gold Coast Dis-credits Chief Sam.

WANTED BY THE POLICE THERE

Pretensions of Ashantee "Chief" Who Is Collecting a Colony of American Negroes to Transplant Them on the Soil of Their Hereditary Home, Are Clouded by Word From an Englishman Who Knows the Situation.

New York, Feb. 11.—If a 318-foot steamship, formerly the Curityba of the Munson line, can be regarded as an earnest of Chief Sam's intent to take American negroes back to the gold coast of Africa, give them lots of land to farm, and win huge profits for them by shipping their produce to the markets of the world, it may be said that the project is well under way.

For the vessel has been bought and paid for, and now lies in Erie basin, with forty negroes, men and women, on board. They are the delegates from Oklahoma, sent to escort the ship to Galveston, when, according to Chief Sam's announced intention, the ship will begin a series of trips to Africa, on each of which it will carry American negroes.

All these delegates are stockholders in the Akim Trading company, Ltd., organized by Chief Sam to further his "back to the African soil" movement for American negroes. A share of stock in the company costs $25 and a share entitles the owner to free passage back to Africa, where all the land will be given to him that he can till. Immense profits are held out by the chief as an inducement to buy stock. Chief Sam has been working up his scheme for two years among southern negroes, and 123 organizations have been formed.

A reporter went over to Erie basin to see Chief Sam. He found the Curityba, which soon will be christened the Liberia, but Chief Sam had left for Boston. The forty delegates were met, however. They were having a religious meeting in the dining room of the ship and were singing darky camp meeting hymns with southern vigor.

"Professor" A. H. Lewis, who said he is a Fiske college graduate, did the talking for the chief. Others on board were Dr. P. J. Dorman and W. H. Hurt, a civil engineer, who is a graduate of Chicago university. The rest of the men were Oklahoma farmers. About fifteen of the delegates are women.

These men and women all have sold out their farms in Oklahoma, packed their goods and are ready to go to Africa for the rest of their lives. They expect to build model cities, have large farms, and establish a form of government of their own. They appeared to be heart and soul in the scheme.

"Chief Sam is an African chief," said Lewis, "and is the head of one of the twelve tribes of Ashantee, which lies on the northern coast of the Gulf of Guinea, west Africa, between Dahomey and the Ivory coast. Chief Sam presides over the Akim tribe.

"Two years ago Dr. Dorman and Professor J. P. Liddell of Mantee, Oklahoma, wrote to him, asking about the possibilities in that country for American colored people. After due deliberation in his counsel, the chief decided to invite the black man of America back to his home. So on his next trip to New York Chief Sam went down to Oklahoma and announced that he had set aside sixty-four square miles for American negroes.

"He organized the company, started the African Pioneer to give publicity to his scheme, and began to sell stock to those who want to go to Africa. The company is capitalized at $1,000,000 and 6,300 men and women, mostly southern negroes, have bought shares and are ready to go as soon as the chief's affairs are in readiness. Galveston will be the Liberia's port when the trips begin."

Lewis said that the chief expects to take over farmers, mechanics of all types, and negro professional men. Among the stockholders are doctors, engineers, school teachers, and the Liberia will have a black crew from cabin boy to captain. Cocoa, goat skins, rubber, mahogany and ostrich feathers are the chief products they hope to market.

A letter was published in the Sun of Feb. 6 from an Englishman on the gold coast, who said A. C. Sam, posing as a chief of the gold coast colony, is wanted by the police there because he has managed to persuade a number of natives to buy his Akim Trading company stock; that Sam's pretensions about enormous concessions of territory are false; that no tribe or chief can set aside a foot of ground without the permission of the British governor, who has not given permission.

HANG HIM INSTANTLY WAS VILLA'S ORDERS

Maximo Castillo Will Be Given Short Shrift.

El Paso, Feb. 11.—The notorious bandit of northern Mexico, Maximo Castillo, is reported a prisoner of the rebel troops of Pancho Villa, who has sworn to hang him instantly to the nearest tree. Villa has not had confirmation of the capture of the leader whose latest outrage was the wrecking and burning of a freight train in Cumbre tunnel on the Mexican Northwestern railroad, and indirectly causing the loss of over fifty lives in a passenger train that later dashed into the burning wreckage. The rebel leader declared that he hoped the reported capture was true, stamping his foot and saying:

"If Castillo is a prisoner the first word to my men when they report that they have him will be to hang him to the nearest tree and then riddle his body with bullets. The crimes he has committed merit any punishment that could be given him. Castillo is fighting for no principle. He is a plain robber, looter and murderer. Death is too good for him and his band."

The reported capture of the bandit leader was brought to Parson, Chihuahua, near the scene of the Cumbre tunnel disaster. A Mexican rode into the lumber town and said that the rebel soldiers had made Castillo and eleven of his men prisoners in the mountains southwest of the tunnel. At last reports Castillo was headed for the American border in just such a direction as the reported capture.

Prevent Diphtheria.

A sore throat is a good breeding place for Diphtheria germs. Protect your children by never neglecting a Sore Throat. You can wisely depend upon TONSILINE. Give Tonsiline upon the first appearance of Sore Throat—don't give Diphtheria a chance in that throat in its weakened condition. When TONSILINE is swallowed it comes directly in contact with the diseased surface and induces a healthy condition of the membranes—then the system can better defend the throat if attacked by Diphtheria germs. Keep TONSILINE in the house where you can get it quick when needed. 25c., 50c. and $1.00.

HARMONY DOES PREVAIL.

Republicans who have followed the progress of their party during the past few months have reason to feel encouraged over the bright prospects for the coming campaign. That the spirit of harmony is prevailing throughout the state is shown by the reports from the district meetings held this week. All of the conventions were attended by enthusiastic crowds and enthusiasm is always a certain evidence of interest. The convention in our own district Tuesday was probably more largely attended and a greater interest was manifested than at any Republican meeting of like character held in the Fourth congressional district during the last ten or twelve years.

The renewed activity which is apparent in Republican circles is attributed to the rapidly growing belief that the time is not far distant when the country will again adopt Republican principles of government. Evidences of unrest and dissatisfaction in the financial and industrial world cannot be passed unnoticed even by the Democratic leaders who are generally trying to cover up the effects and defects of the new tariff law and other legislation which have been enacted by the Democratic congress. The Democrats are not in control because the majority of the voters wanted them but because the majority were unable to agree on one of the candidates of the opposing parties. Coming into power in this manner the party cannot expect to hold control for any length of time unless its course is highly satisfactory.

In outlining the work of the Republican party for the future, we believe that almost sole attention should be centered upon the policies which will produce advancement and progress for all classes of citizens. The work of the party must be for the future. It is the party of substantial progress. It is the party that has accomplished the great reforms since the Civil War but while the members may find pleasure and satisfaction in the past record, it will avail nothing unless they regard it as an inspiration to work for future advancement.

During the past year a great deal has been said about the factions within the ranks of the party. Much serious thought has been given to the "get-together" idea and it is well that this should be considered for harmony is essential to ultimate victory. But it must not be overlooked that harmony will follow when the members of the party become imbued with the one idea that Republicanism champions the rights of the people and embodies the best principles of American government.

Within the ranks of the Republican party there is no dissatisfaction. The dissension is all on the outside and comes from leaders of other organizations who hope to tear down the strength of the Republican party, but it is big enough and strong enough to withstand such attacks. The Republican party has a great task to accomplish. Its work cannot be done by any other political organization. The party does not have time to indulge in internal disputes. Its members are earnest and sincere in their fight for the principles of government which they believe to be essential for the protection of our country. Sincerity of purpose always commands strength and as the Republican phalanx move forward under the banner of patriotism, good citizenship and honest government, many new recruits will be willing to aid in the battle. To be sure the Republican party is big enough and broad enough to welcome all those who for any reason temporarily left its ranks in 1912. That dissension is now history. The work of the future is at hand and from all parts of the country come the reports that the Republican army is rapidly gaining strength and will make an able and effective fight next November.

Despite explanations which may come on second thought an official attitude on any public question can usually be determined by his vote.

IT WAS TERRIBLE

By FLORENCE LILLIAN HENDERSON.

"It's a sinful shame!" declared prim, straight-laced Miss Tabitha Duncan. "Aunt Lucia must have taken leave of her senses!" chorused Bart Duncan, her nephew.

The criticisms were not generous. Both were pensioners on the bounty of Miss Lucia Warden, age thirty-five, looking ten years younger, and, although missing most of the joys of life, by no means soured, and still hoping and longing that some day Love would come along and help fill out her lonely life.

She had given Miss Duncan a home, she had educated Bart. She owned some property, and those two coveted it—at least counted on getting their share of it if it was ever distributed.

For this reason any deviation from personal or household rules was viewed with concern by the twin of selfish time-servers. What had aroused their present consternation was the fact that Lucia had not only allowed a traveling circus to show on a lot she owned, but had visited it several times.

"I don't see what you find so objectionable in a clean, harmless entertainment," Lucia told her sister-in-law. "The clown is simply funny, the others do some wonderful acts, and they have two little children who give a pretty exhibition with some trained ponies who are perfectly entrancing."

Wisely Miss Duncan kept her resentment to herself. It burst out afresh, however, the day the circus took down its tent. What occurred so stirred up Miss Tabitha that she hastened to the office of her nephew and the twin held an active indignation meeting at once.

"It's just terrible, Bart!" pronounced the agitated Tabitha. "It seems as if the glare and glitter of that horrid show has just set Lucia wild. When I tried to talk to her, she said that she was tired of the hum-drum life she was leading, and wanted variety and human sympathy. Well, she's found it!"

"It's Just Terrible, Bart!"

"What do you mean?"

"Bart, I believe that Lucia has fallen in love!"

If Bart had been a woman he would have shrieked; as it was he turned pale.

"Incredible!" he gasped.

"It's true. It seems that those two little acting girls are under the charge of a man calling himself Henry Morton. He used to be a balloon acrobat, but had a bad fall. His brother, now dead, was also an actor, and had trained the children. Morton is traveling with them as their guardian. I won't say that he is not a polite, dignified gentleman, but he has fascinated Lucia, and I hate him. Well, that isn't the worst of it."

"What next?"

"Why, somehow the two children have caught the measles and can't go on with the show. Morton has canceled their contract and Lucia, soft-hearted Lucia, has turned the house into a hospital."

"You don't mean to say that she has taken those two children?"

"Yes, I do, and Morton is there, too, helping nurse them."

It was all true. Without pausing to analyze feelings or motives, Lucia Warden had drifted into a new environment. The curtain had risen on the prospect of a new delightful life. Hers was a heart that had gone hungering through the world, and now she lavished all the riches of her warm, sympathetic nature on the two little waifs under her roof.

Never had an ingenious, true-souled little woman more appreciative friends. After the hardship, uncertainties and discomfort of half a season of roughing it with the circus, the little children snuggled down in the pretty, cozy home of Miss Lucia like birds housed in a cherished nest.

Their uncle would scarcely leave their presence. His ministrations were assiduous and untiring. When Lucia came into the sick room, a sort of glorified contentment came into his bronzed, serious face.

Lucia learned the history of the little ones, left under a year's contract with the circus company, with which their father and uncle had been connected.

"That is all over now," Morton told her, with profound satisfaction. "It has been a providence that your illness came at a time when your kind heart opened the doors of your beautiful home to the homeless and distressed. As soon as the little ones are well enough, I shall seek a quiet village like your own, engage in some small business and make them forget the old artificial life we have led."

He told her how he had never married because of the hard round of duties, the broken fortunes of his brother and his family had required. She read in his face the steadiness, the depths of longing of a matured mind. It seemed as though their meeting had bridged a chasm of two loyal souls seeking an empty heart to make of it a palace of love, fidelity and happiness.

And then one evening, as they sat in the glow of the firelight and the shaded lamps, the little ones asleep in each other's arms, like cherubs, Henry Morton boldly, bravely told this superb friend that he loved her.

She was waiting for the declaration, for she was hoping for it. How true, how manly he seemed, as the actual tears of joy came into his honest eyes when she told him how her heart had gone out to his lonely life and had cherished the dear little ones.

"We must do something!" declared Miss Tabitha to her nephew two days later, when she learned how matters stood.

Morton had gone away to close out a little piece of property he owned at a distance.

"Leave it to me," replied Bart, after he had gained every detail he could as to the past life and antecedents of Morton.

Four days later he sent for Miss Tabitha in great excitement and exultation of spirits.

"I've got him!" he chuckled. "That hint you had about his living at a certain town five years ago has brought results. I wrote to a law firm there. They sent me a photograph of him said it was the only one they could find, and that after his trouble he had left there, and they had not seen him since. Look there."

Triumphantly, he handed to his relative a photograph. It pictured Henry Morton—only in a convict's suit.

"I wonder what Lucia will say to that?" cried Miss Tabitha. "We must unmask this villain at once!"

Henry Morton had just returned to the village as Bart and his aunt appeared.

"I have come upon a solemn mission," said Bart, filled with a sense of righteous indignation. "Aunt Lucia, this man is an ex-convict!"

The astonished Lucia took the proffered photograph. With supreme confidence in her face she handed it to Mr. Morton.

"My friends," said the latter with a plying smile, "you seem to have happened across a picture of mine taken when I was an actor in a stage drama. As to the 'trouble' you refer to, that alludes to some financial troubles of my dead brother."

Miss Tabitha thought it best to plant herself with another relative. Bart sneaked into obscurity. As to Lucia, Mr. Morton and the little ones—they became part and parcel of the happiest family circle in all Christendom. (Copyright, 1913, by W. G. Chapman.)

BETTER THAN A KEEN BRAIN

Intuition In Sport Would Seem to Have an Advantage Over Cultivated Intelligence.

To what extent do sport and brains assimilate? We have known ball players who on the field had all the wisdom of an Aristotle, the shrewdness of a Disraeli, the genius of a Napoleon; but who, outside of baseball, didn't have brains enough to stroll in from under a cloudburst.

On the other hand, take the case of Fred Merkle, of the Giants. No contender in the game has been so consistently labeled a "bonehead." He has been branded as solid ivory from skull to hoof. Yet of the 400 big-league players there are not a dozen enrolled with anything like Merkle's brain attached to their domes of thought.

There are not a dozen—or half a dozen—as well read, as students, as logical in debate or as wise in as many different things that pertain to what we term existence.

Merkle, outside of baseball, would stand high as a citizen of general knowledge and understanding. But on the field there are dozens who don't know the difference between calculus and Catullus, but who can outthink him two to one.

Frequently too keen a brain is a handicap in sport, for it produces too great an imagination, and imagination is fatal to success. One of the hardest, contenders in the world to beat in any game is a youngster who gets going, for he doesn't know enough to understand where the psychological pitfalls wait.

Mathewson, Collins and others are smart off the field as well as on.

But this doesn't apply to all. We have known a lot of smart fellows, also, who were boobs in the harness of sport.

"Why shouldn't — be a great golfer?" a well-known pro, said to us a day or two ago. "The guy doesn't know the difference between an 8 and a 4."

We know one star of baseball without any particular outside intelligence who, as far as we have seen and heard, never made a bonehead play in his life. And he told us once that he never had to think out a play in his life—that each play came to him by intuition.—Collier's Weekly.

SOCIAL EVENTS.

Y. M. B. C. SOCIAL.

The Young Men's Bible Class of the First Baptist Sunday School were entertained for their monthly social at the home of Russell Phillips on South Chestnut street Tuesday evening. Plans for enlarging the work of the class were discussed, games and other amusements were enjoyed, and refreshments were served. The social proved a very pleasant event.

VALENTINE PARTY.

Mrs. George Lockmund entertained the members of the Young Peoples' Society of the St. Paul church Tuesday evening at her home on East Fifth street with a Valentine party. It was the regular business meeting of the society and after the business was disposed of the evening was delightfully spent. The decorations and refreshments were in keeping with the approaching Valentine Day and the "post office" gave the guests their share of valentines.

BIG BLACK SNAKE CAPTURED
ALIVE BY RURAL MAIL CARRIER

Reptile Taken Home by Herman Butler of Paris Crossing, Measured 4½ Feet.

Herman Butler, a rural mail carrier from the Paris Crossing post-office, believes he holds the record for capturing live snakes. A few days ago while he was driving over his route he noticed a big black snake in the road and decided to take it home.

Butler succeeded in getting the snake into the wagon and took it along with him as prima facie evidence of his claim. The snake measured four feet and six inches. It is one of the largest black snakes seen in this vicinity for several years.

Mrs. Welsh Dead.

Mrs. Johanna Welsh, widow of the late Andrew Welsh, died this morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. James Cadem, Indianapolis Avenue. Mrs. Welsh suffered a stroke of paralysis Monday afternoon from which she never rallied.

The deceased was born in Ireland, January 28, 1842, and came to the United States and to Seymour in 1854 accompanied by an older sister. She was married 49 years ago to Andrew Welsh, and they made their home in this city. To this union were born six children, P. J. Welsh of Louisville, David Welsh of St. Louis, James Welsh, Mrs. James Cadem, Mrs. Louis Eckstein of this city and Mrs. Nell Neville of Indianapolis.

Mrs. Welsh was a devoted mother neighbor and friend and her many acts of kindness in time of sickness and death won her a large circle of friends. She was the last member of a large family of children. She was a member of the Catholic church.

The funeral services will be held Friday morning from the St. Ambrose Catholic church, conducted by Rev. C. J. Conrad. Burial in the Catholic cemetery.

FIRST MOTHERS' PENSION STARTED AT EVANSVILLE

Benevolent Men and Women Pay Mrs. Alice Kelly, Widow, $2.50 Per Week.

By United Press.

Evansville, Ind., Feb. 11—Mothers' pensions in Indiana is a fact today.

There is no mothers' pension law in the state, but in this city there is a club of public spirited men and women who are paying $2.50 weekly to Mrs. Alice Kelly, widow, to help her help her three little children.

Mrs. Kelly's offer to give away her two youngest boys attracted wide attention. She found however, that the babies refused to leave her, crying piteously when they were taken away from their mother. Then the popular pledges were obtained to support the widow.

After her husband's death more than a year ago, Mrs. Kelly supported herself and her little brood of three by taking in washing. Typhoid attacked her and rendered her unfit for the wash tub. More than $16 a month has been pledged for Mrs. Kelly and the money is being given to her at the start at the rate of $2.50 weekly.

Rheumatism
Cured.

You Will Feel Like an Acrobat After Using
S. S. S.

Rheumatism is simply a name given to designate a variety of pains, and can only be reached by irrigating the entire blood supply with a naturally assimilative antiseptic. There is but one standard rheumatism remedy, and it is sold in all drug stores under the name of S. S. S. Attempts are often made to sell something claimed to be "just as good." Insist positively you will have nothing but S. S. S.

It contains only pure vegetable elements and is absolutely free of mercury, iodine or potash or arsenic. The recoveries of all types of rheumatism by the use of S. S. S. is a fine tribute to the natural efficacy of this remarkable medicine, for it is assimilated just as naturally, just as specifically, and just as well as the most acceptable, most reliable, and most readily digested food. Do not fail to get a bottle of S. S. S. today. You will be astonished at the results. If your rheumatism is of such a nature that you would like to consult a specialist, write to the medical department, The Swift Specific Co., 229 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

OPENING WEEK SHOW

Auto Displays Will Be as Extensive as Those of Big Shows.

The automobile displays at the various salesrooms in Indianapolis, Feb. 23-28, during the opening week of the Indianapolis Automobile Trade Association, will be extensive enough to show everything displayed at the New York and Chicago shows.

In fact, many of these exhibits, especially those of the Indiana makers, will be moved bodily to Indianapolis for display purposes. There have been many noticeable changes made in the American automobile in the last year. Chief among these are the great increase in the number of six-cylinder machines manufactured, the growing popularity of left-side drive, the almost universal adoption of self-starting systems and the building of stream line bodies. Some of the old-line makers, however, have stood by the "four," along with the European reaction toward the "four." One large maker of "fours" has introduced a two-speed rear axle, giving, it is claimed, all the advantages of the "six."

Manufacturers who last year built "big sixes" this year are adding "light sixes" to their lines, and many makers who last year built only "fours" are now building "sixes" of one type or other.

The last year has seen the self-starter and the left-side drive idea gain equal popularity, where each was yet a novelty at last year's exhibition. The self-starter needed no friend to plead its cause; its advantages were too apparent.

The stream line body has done more than any other influence since the side-door entrance came into vogue to improve the appearance of the automobile. For more than a year the various manufacturers have been experimenting with different designs, and nearly all have at last struck on patterns that are pleasing to the eye and that afford the greatest comfort and convenience to the occupants.

Retired Georgia Planter's Advice to Kidney Sufferers.

Regarding the wonderful curative merits of your Swamp-Root, I cannot say too much. After suffering severely for three years or more with severe pains caused by weak kidneys, I was finally induced to try Swamp-Root through a testimonial I read in one of the newspapers. I was in such a condition that I was obliged to arise from my bed six or eight times every night. I purchased a fifty-cent bottle and before it was used I felt so much relief that I purchased a one dollar bottle and by the time this was taken the old pains had left my back and I could sleep the whole night through. I am a retired planter, 70 years of age, and owing to Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, I am in the best of health and feel like a boy. I am always glad to recommend Swamp-Root to those who are in need of it.

Sincerely yours,
C. E. USSERY,

MARION'S MAYOR IN EARNEST

In Cases Where Convictions Are Made in Bawdy House Cases, Mayor Batchelor Announces That He Will Prosecute the Owners of the Buildings in Which Such Illicit Commerce Is Conducted.

Marion, Ind., Feb. 11.—Called from his home to hold court in a case where a couple had been arrested on a statutory charge in a downtown business block, Mayor Batchelor announced that in all cases where conviction was obtained in such cases he would prosecute the owners of blocks in which rooms were rented for immoral purposes, and instructed the police to bring in such owners along with the persons charged with the offense. The mayor stated it was his purpose to clean up the city in other respects as well as illegal sales of liquor.

George M. Kieder and Jere Torrence, proprietors of the Davis drug store, each were fined $500 and sentenced to six months in jail in police court on the charge of keeping a "blind tiger." The cases were immediately appealed. These were the first cases tried before Mayor Batchelor following wholesale arrests and confiscation of the entire wine and liquor stocks of nine druggists last Thursday night upon the ground that the proprietors were not registered pharmacists, hence were liable under the "blind tiger" law.

RANDOLPH COUNTY AGITATED

Scores of Indictments Returned by the Grand Jury.

Winchester, Ind., Feb. 11.—The Randolph county grand jury has returned sixty-seven indictments and its action has caused no little excitement throughout the county. The jury has been in session since Jan. 19 and between 250 and 260 witnesses have been examined.

The jury has not adjourned and probably will not file a final report until tomorrow evening. It will return more indictments. Residents of the county were shocked when they learned of the action taken by the jury. Wholesale arrests are expected and it is predicted by good authority that the county bastille will be filled to overflow.

Official statements regarding the grand jury work are unobtainable. It is understood that their many investigations have revealed law violations dating back two years. Already Sheriff Hennings has served nine indictments which were returned last week, and several of these prisoners are inmates of the county jail. Eight years ago more than 300 indictments were returned by a grand jury and one Winchester man was subject to eighty-two of that number. But ten of the cases were followed by court procedure.

It is intimated by those in position to know that more than 200 indictments will be returned by this jury. Witnesses have been brought before the jury from all parts of the county. The law violations that the grand jury has found, it is understood, range from assault and battery to the most serious crimes.

KING GIVES NOTICE TO THE ULSTERITES

No Bulldozing Tactics Will Be Tolerated.

London, Feb. 11.—King George and Queen Mary, in sunshine and warmth which was more like May than February, drove in state to open the fourth session of the second parliament during the sovereign's reign. The crowds along the route were far larger than in any recent time, and the king and queen were enthusiastically greeted.

The king, wearing his crown and his state robes, read his speech in the house of lords in a clear voice, which was audible in every part of the chamber. The queen, who sat beside him, also wore a crown. She wore a cloth of gold robe. Her corsage was glittering with diamonds.

The chamber was crowded more than is usually the case with peers in their official scarlet robes. The galleries were filled with peeresses, who were covered with jewels and wore coronets. The spectacle was altogether gorgeous and imposing. As the king began to read the paragraph in his address in reference to Ireland there was a respectful silence, and this was maintained and became intense as he went on. "You could hear everybody listening," it was said afterward. The king seemed to emphasize his statement with deliberate impressiveness.

The fiction that the speech from the throne is the sovereign's utterance is so universally recognized as fiction that the statement in regard to Ireland which was put in his mouth by the ministers was recognized on all hands as an admission that the cabinet does not intend to stand anything in the bulldozing line from Ulster. This had a calming effect which Premier Asquith's speech enhanced. The day passed without any fireworks.

MILLIONS FOR BETTER ROADS

House Passes Shackleford Bill
Amid Applause.

WILL THE PRESIDENT VETO IT?

Members Who So Hilariously Acclaimed the Vote on This $25,000,000-a-Year Measure Have Haunting Fear That Mr. Wilson, With One Stroke of His Pen, May Undo All the Hopes They Have Based Upon This Bill.

Washington, Feb. 11.—After much discussion the house passed, by a vote of 282 to 42, the Shackleford bill appropriating $25,000,000, which is to be the annual charge on the revenues of the government for the improvement of roads throughout the United States. Shouts of approval signaled the passage of the good roads bill. The only thing that marred the joy of the occasion was the thought in the minds of members that President Wilson might spurn the bill, destroying with a stroke of his pen all the work that had been done in whipping the good roads measure into shape. Noisy applause greeted the announcement that the bill had been passed, and Representative Shackleford of Missouri, who framed it, was warmly congratulated for his labors. Nearly all had been given a slice of pork, and all felt grateful to Mr. Shackleford, who had stood on the barrel for three days repulsing the attacks of the few who sought to push him off.

Immediately following the passage of the good roads bill the "economists" who had cheered the measure on its way, met to consider ways and means to eliminate the "extravagances" in the naval bill, notably the authorization for two battleships.

The Shackleford bill was framed with a nicety that appealed to members. No state was overlooked; Republican strongholds were given as much recognition as Democratic strongholds, and everybody agreed that Mr. Shackleford had allotted the appropriation in a spirit of generosity not marred by partisan consideration.

House leaders have no fears over the fate of the Shackleford bill in the senate. They admit that $10,000,000 or $15,000,000 may be added to the bill in the senate, but this they argue will only serve to make the measure more popular in both branches of congress. There are reports that President Wilson looks with disapproval on the good roads bill. He is said to take the stand that before congress enters upon a policy of improving the highways of the country an investigation should be made by experts. This was known in the house long before the Shackleford bill was passed, but it does not count with the men who are looking for applause "back home."

Under the terms of the Shackleford bill $25,000,000 is provided annually for federal aid in the construction of good roads. The money is to be divided among the states, one-half in the proportion that the population of each state bears to the combined population of all states and one-half in proportion that the postroads of each state bear to the total postroads mileage in the states.

JAPS STORM PARLIAMENT

Graft Charges Affecting the Navy Led to Riots.

Tokio, Feb. 11.—A riotous mob attacked the Japanese house of parliament. It was driven back by the police only after the entrance gates had been broken down and scores of persons injured. The rioting followed a big mass meeting at which resolutions were passed to impeach the cabinet for its attitude in connection with the graft charges against Japanese naval officers, several of whom are accused of receiving commissions for influencing the allotment of admiralty contracts in favor of a German firm. There was also a free fight on the floor of the diet when it rejected a resolution of want of confidence in the government.

Didn't Think It Would Shoot.

Washington, Ind., Feb. 11.—Miss Etta Atha, aged sixteen, daughter of Thomas Atha of Odon, was accidentally shot with a revolver in the hands of Mrs. Lee Ketchum. Mr. Ketchum had recently had the weapon repaired and his wife did not know it would shoot. She playfully pointed the revolver at Miss Atha, who was a guest at her home, and remarked she believed she would shoot her.

Wounds Terminated Fatally.

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 11.—Charles Boyd, a negro, shot by Mrs. M. C. Laughead two weeks ago when, she says, he was climbing through a window into her home at 2 o'clock in the morning, died from the wound. He denied he was attempting to enter the house to rob it and said he was going through the yard as a short cut.

O'Day Will Succeed Evers.

Chicago, Feb. 11.—Johnny Evers will not be manager of the Chicago National League club this year, according to a statement given out in President Murphy's office here. He will be succeeded by Umpire Henry ("Hank") O'Day, former manager of the Cincinnati club.

Gems In Verse

THE AGED IRISH EXILE

IT'S a grand land, mavourneen, this land of my seeking.
Where a man can be all he dreamed he might be.
But I'm getting old, lass, and when night comes a-sneaking
My heart takes to pining 'way over the sea.
I see the thatched roof and the peat fire burning.
The truth in your eyes and the promise there, too—
The promise of love, with its infinite learning.
If I'd stayed home, mavourneen, I might have had you

But the call of the world to the keen ear of twenty
Is the siren's own song when the young blood is hot.
Faith, I've fought a good fight and I've friends by the plenty,
And there's never a man that can say I have not.
But at dusk when the thoughts of the day are disbanding
Like soldiers of war when the fighting is through,
Then I long for the peace that is past understanding
That might have been mine, lass, in Erin with you.

Sure, there's women have kissed me, with soft arms entwining,
But there's none that gave the love that uplifts and endures.
And I might have seen you, with your dear face all shining,
A-crooning to children—my children and yours.
And children of theirs might come slyly a-peeping,
By tales of the banshee be lured to my knee.
'Tis a great land, this land that my wild feet came seeking.
But, oh, my aushla, 'tis home I would be!

THE LOST GARDEN.

BRING the rose of Sharon back,
Bring the zinnia and the phlox;
Bring the dusty miller, too,
And the stately hollyhocks
Bring me all those simples fine
That were savory and were sweet
In the gardens that were mine—
Village of the little street.

Bring the golden glow I loved,
Bring the gladiolus, too,
In its crimson gown of bloom
And the bloodroot in the dew
Bring the dahlias' frothy heads,
O thou Gardener of the sun,
Till again where fancy treads
All the old time gardens run.
Bring hydrangeas, with their plume
Much too heavy to be borne
Bring the pansies in their bloom
Of the opening eyes of morn.
Bring the begonias by the path
And geraniums richly red;
Bring me dreams—beyond this
Of the old time garden bed
—Baltimore Sun.

FIRST THROUGH THE CANAL.

WHO was the first through the canal,
Through the mighty ditch?
Not a stately merchantman
With a cargo rich,
Not a pleasure-seeking yacht
Speeding on the tide,
Nor a dead man-o'-war
Flaunting battle pride.
Nay, 'twas to a better type
That the honor fell,
Just a sporting little tug
Pulling burdens well,
Like the humble citizen
Of this nation great,
Plain and stubby, faithful, strong—
He who pays the freight.
—New York Sun.

FATE.

TWO shall be born the whole wide world apart,
And one, a maiden lonely and remote.
Dreaming the world old dream for ever new,
Shall write her name upon a new laid egg
Or paste her address on a butter crock
Or slip it in a crate of summer squash,
A box of berries, or a bag of beans
And send it forth freighted with deep desire.
And one who waits beyond the hazy hills,
Below the utmost purple rim of earth
If you prefer, state city by the sea
Shall get the egg, the box, the butter jar;
Shall treasure in his heart the name it brings
And by a sweet psychometizing know
Its message, scoffed by others, is for him
And find his own heart's home. And this is fate.
—Rochester Post-Express

THE OLD CLOCK.

THE clock keeps tickin' the whole day through
To measure the hours that seem so few
And the sky's a blue
And the day's a brand new
The old clock says: "Howdydo! Howdydo!"
WHEN the sun at noon shines warm and gay
An' you're tired of the effort of makin' hay
You seek delay
For repose or play,
But the old clock says: "On your way!
On your way!"

WHEN, all tired out, you are turnin' in
You growl at the loss where you hoped to win
Then you caw an' grin
As you hear the din
That the clock sets up: "Try agin! Try agin!"
—Washington Star

IDLENESS.

THERE is no dearer lover of lost hours
Than I
I can be fatter than the idliest flowers;

More idly lie
Than noonday lilies languidly afloat
And water pillowed in a windless moat
And I can be
Stillier than some gray stone
That hath no motion known
It seems to me
That my still blessed doth make my own
All magic gifts of joy's simplicity
—S. Weir Mitchell

CRAFTY.

"HOW calm it is, this summer sea,"
And yet how treacherous," said she.
"Yes," he replied, "I'm free to say
'Tis very full of craft today!"

CHAPTER XVII.

John Valiant Asks a Question.

Valiant went with them to the outer door. A painful thought was flooding his mind. It hampered his speech and it was only by a violent effort that he found voice:

"One moment! There is a question I would like to ask."

Both gentlemen had turned upon the steps and as they faced him he thought a swift glance passed between them. They waited courteously, the doctor with his habitual frown, the major's hand fumbling for the black ribbon on his waistcoat.

"Since I came here, I have heard"—his tone was uneven—"of a duel in which my father was a principal. There was such a meeting?"

"There was," said the doctor after the slightest pause of surprise. "Had you known nothing of it?"

"Absolutely nothing."

The major cleared his throat. "It was something he might naturally not have made a record of," he said. "The two had been friends, and it—it was a fatal encounter for the other. The doctor and I were your father's seconds."

There was a moment's silence before Valiant spoke again. When he did his voice was steady, though drops had sprung to his forehead. "Was there any circumstance in that meeting that might be construed as reflecting on his—honor?"

"Good God, no!" said the major explosively.

"On his bearing as a gentleman?"

There was a hiatus this time in which he could hear his heart beat. In that single exclamation the major seemed to have exhausted his vocabulary. He was looking at the ground. It was the doctor who spoke at last, in a silence that to the man in the doorway weighed like a hundred atmospheres.

"No!" he said bluntly. "Certainly not. What put that into your head?"

When he was alone in the library Valiant opened the glass door and took from the shelf the morocco case. The old shiver of repugnance ran over him at the very touch of the leather. In the farthest corner was a low commode. He set the case on this and moved the big tapestry screen across the angle, hiding it from view.

In the great hall at Damory Court the candles in their brass wall-sconces blinked back from the polished parquetry and the shining fire-dogs, filling the rather solemn gloom with an air of warmth and creature-comfort. Leaning against the newest post, Valiant gazed about him. How different it all looked from the night of his coming!

He began to walk up and down the floor, teasing pricks of restlessness urging him. He opened the door and passed into the unlighted dining-room. On the sideboard sat a silver loving-cup that had arrived the day before in a huge box with his books and knick-knacks. He had won it at polo. He lifted it, fingering its carved handles. He remembered that when that particular score had been made, Katharine Fargo had sat in one of the drags at the side-line.

But the memory evoked no thrill. Instead, the thought of her pale, cold, passionless beauty called up another mobile, thoroughbred face instinct with quick flashings of mirth and hauteur. Again he felt the fierce clutch of small fingers, as they fought with his in that struggle for his life. Each line of that face stood before him—the arch-her red rose in his hand. The musky scent of the pressed leaves in the book in his pocket seemed to be all about him.

The odor of living roses, in fact, was in the air. It came on the scarce-felt breeze, a heavy calling perfume. He walked on, keeping the road by the misty infiltrating shimmer of the stars, with a sensation rather of gliding than of walking. It occurred to him that if, as scientists say, colors emit sound-tones, scents also should possess a music of their own: the honeysuckle fragrance, maybe—soft mellow fluting as of diminutive wind-instruments; the far-faint sickly odor of lilies—the upper register of fairy violins; this spicy breath of roses—blending, throbbing chords like elfin echoes of an Italian harp. The fancy pleased him; he could imagine the perfume now in the air carried with it an under-music, like a ghostly harping.

It came to him at the same instant that this was no mere fancy. Somewhere in the languorous night a harp was being played. He paused and listened intently, then went on toward the sound. The rose scent had grown stronger; it was almost in that heavy air, as if he were breasting an ethereal sea of attar. He felt as if he were treading on a path of rose-leaves, down which the increasing melody flowed crimson to him, calling, calling.

He stopped stock-still. He had been skirting a close-cropped hedge of box. This had ended abruptly and he was looking straight up a bar of green-yellow radiance from a double doorway. The latter opened on a porch and the light, flung across this, drenched an arbor of climbing roses, making it stand out a mass of woven rubies set in emerald.

He drew a long sigh of more than delight, for framed in the doorway he saw a figure in misty white, leaning to the gilded upright of a harp. He knew at once that it was Shirley. Holding his breath, he came closer, his feet muffled in the thick grass. He stood in the dense obscurity, one hand gripping the gnarled limb of a catalpa, his eyes following the shapely arms from wrist to shoulder, the fingers straying across the strings, the bending cheek caressing the carved wood. She was playing the melody of Shelley's "Indian Serenade"—touching the chords softly and tenderly—and his lips moved, molding themselves soundlessly to the words.

The serenade died in a single long note. As if in answer to it there rose a flood of bird-music from beyond the arbor—jets of song that swelled and rippled to a soaring melody. She heard it, too, for the gracie fingers fell from the strings. She listened a moment, with head held to one side, then sprang up and came through the door and down the steps.

He hesitated a moment, then a single stride took him from the shadow.

ing brows, the cameo-delicacy of profile, the magnolia skin and hair like a brown-gold cloud across the sun.

He stepped down to the graveled drive and followed it to the gate, then, bareheaded, took the Red Road. Along this highway he had rattled in Uncle Jefferson's crazy hack—with

RIOT FOLLOWS HER RETURN TO LONDON

Mrs. Pankhurst Again Gets In the Storm Center.

London, Feb. 11.—The suffragist leader, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, who has returned from the continent, occasioned a small riot last evening, and but for the fact that she duped the police she would now be in prison. Mrs. Pankhurst addressed a few hundred persons from an upper window of the house where she is stopping in Campden Hill square. She declared that she would never serve out her three years' term of imprisonment for inciting riots, and proclaimed herself to be still a seditious person. She challenged the government to rearrest her and to subject her to forcible feeding, adding: "I am coming out to you in a few moments."

Shortly afterward a woman who closely resembled Mrs. Pankhurst left the house and the police moved forward to arrest her. The disguise of the woman who left the house was so good that the suffragettes in the crowd shared in the delusion that it was Mrs. Pankhurst. They fought the police who had arrested the woman and attempted to rescue her. The officers had a tough time, being punched, kicked and belabored with clubs, but although they were greatly outnumbered, they held on to their prisoner, who shrieked and struggled.

Meantime the anti-suffragettes, of whom there were many in the crowd, took a hand in behalf of the police and a free fight followed. Many women were knocked down and injured. Finally the police, who were much bruised and scratched, got their prisoner to the police station, only to find that they had been hoaxed and that the woman was not Mrs. Pankhurst.

Mrs. Pankhurst's house is being watched and she will be arrested if she leaves.

THIS CLOSES THE INCIDENT

Prosecutor Nolle Indictments Against President Hanley.

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 11.—Indictments charging Dr. E. A. Hanley, president of Franklin college, with assault and battery on his father, Calvin Hanley, at the Hanley home in Middletown, Sept. 9, have been nolle on motion of Prosecutor Werneke. This disposes of the case, which attracted wide attention a few months ago.

The indictments followed complaints to the grand jury that Dr. Hanley had gone to the home of his father and brutally beaten the elder Hanley. Dr. Hanley admitted "whipping" his father, and said that he was prompted to chastise the elder Hanley because of the long-continued and persistent mistreatment of his mother at the hands of his father.

PALMER BILL IS ADVANCED STEP

Measure Proposes to Prohibit Interstate Commerce in Goods Made By Children.

COMPREHENSIVE IN SCOPE

Purpose of Bill is to Free Boys and Girls Under Fourteen Years of Age From Factories.

By United Press.

Washington, Feb. 11—The introduction of the Palmer child labor bill, according to Mrs. Florence Kelly, member of the board of trustees of the National Child Labor Committee, is a long step forward in the fight to free children from factories and send them to school. The bill, which proposes to prohibit interstate commerce in goods produced by children under fourteen years of age, or by children under sixteen who have worked more than eight hours a day, is declared to be the most important of any similar bills that have been introduced. Mrs. Kelly has prepared the following article for the United Press explaining why this is so: The child labor bill introduced in Congress by Representative A. Mitchell Palmer, of Pennsylvania, is more comprehensive than the Kenyon child labor bill in which hitherto I have been deeply interested. It applies to manufacturing establishments, factories, mines and quarries, mills, canneries and workshops. It is more extensive than the Kenyon bill in that it regulates the employment of children between the ages of 14 and 16 years, restricting their working hours to eight in one day and to the daylight hours from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. Like the Kenyon Bill it applies to interstate commerce.

The enforcement of the proposed law is made the duty of each district attorney to whom the Secretary of Labor shall report any violation. It is quite new in providing that prosecutions must be begun when a state factory inspector, commissioner of labor, state medical inspector, school attendance officer or any other person shall present satisfactory evidence of a violation of the law. The penalty provided is a fine of not more than $1,000 nor less than $100 or imprisonment for not more than one year or both such fine and imprisonment.

The bill marks a long advance over the proposals contained in both the Kenyon Bill and the old Beveridge Bill because it applies to a wider range of employments, and to older children (between 14 and 16) for whom it forbids night work and establishes the eight hour day. In short, it applies to more occupations, and more children, contains more provisions and authorizes more officials to begin suit upon complaint of more different sets of people.

The question is often asked whether an interstate commerce provision would supersede state laws and municipal ordinance. It could not do this for the following reasons: It can in the nature of things apply only to goods manufacturer, mined or quarried; it leaves untouched the messenger service, employment in department stores and other forms of retail trade; all agricultural work such as cotton picking, berry and hop picking, wedding in the beet fields, and all other kinds of agricultural, and horticultural work in which children are employed in ever increasing numbers.

Such a law cannot interfere with street work, such as newspaper vending, peddling, boot-blackening, and service as delivery boys on wagons, which have to be dealt with by state laws or municipal ordinance. Furthermore, there are certain dangerous trades which by a score of existing state laws have been forbidden to all children under 16 years or 18 years. The only feasible attempt to touch upon this important point by federal legislation is the prohibition of work in mines and quarries by children under 16 years. Such a provision is included in the Palmer Bill but no protection is afforded to children in other dangerous trades for dangerous machines and various occupations involving the lives of others are not and could not be included.

We have an analogy in the case of the Pure Food Law. The states and cities have never been so stimulated to enact and enforce legislation with regard to foods prepared for sale within their own borders as since the enactment of the Pure Food and Drugs law, and there is every reason to believe that the proposed federal child labor law would work in the same way. I believe that the educa-
